Event Software From evocos Now Includes CPD Event Management Module

6th April 2011, Guildford, Surrey: Event software provider, evocos, today launched a new module of their event management software solution. The module has been built to help training and event managers direct and control their CPD (Continuing Professional Development) programmes.

The new CPD module will come as part of the whole evocos event software package as standard from today. The new module enables training managers to capture their members' individual professional development growth online and enable member's to access their personal data from any location at any time. In addition, the evocos CPD software also lets members:

- Record their own career goals,
- Plan activities
- Analyse their history,
- Reflect on their progress
- View for all possible and relevant professional growth courses and workshops that are available to them.

Commenting on the new module, Kate Oxtan, evocos Marketing Manager said "By creating this module specifically for those carrying out CPD training courses, we've responded once again to the demands of the market. This module will not only help delegates take greater control and ownership of their CPD training, but will save the training event manager time and money by automating and streamlining key processes."

evocos event software is a fully closed loop solution and includes all modules, giving customers one of the most comprehensive event solution on the market today.
